1. The articles and books on Soviet intelligence and security operations we are forwarding to you are to be issued as ad hoc reports. They are to be issued individually, under the titles, authors, and sources indicated either on attached slips of paper (in the case of the longer items), or typed on the covers (as in case of shorter ones).

2. It does not appear likely that there will be a great demand for these reports, and barring subsequent instructions to the contrary ten copies of each initially should suffice. More could be issued if the demand increases in individual instances. It is likely that the articles on Abel, Lonsdale, and Sorge will attract the most interest, followed by those on WW II operations.

3. A number of minor corrections have been made in various of the items. Nearly all of them are indicated in sheets of paper attached to the material involved, and in general call for the correction of proper names repeatedly misspelled. Pencilled-in underlinings, check marks, or notations which do not consitute editorial emendations should be ingnored, however.

4. Photos, pictures, and related captions are to be deleted.
